

CITYWALL CLIMBING WALLS

Climbing systems and technologies for the future

CITYWALL, as a brand, has been present in the climbing industry for over 25 years. We live and breathe climbing walls, executing every project with devotion and focus, while no detail is neglected.

Our company's headquarters is in Slovenia, a country with a long history and culture in climbing and home to some of the best climbers in the world, including an Olympic gold medalist in sports climbing, Janja Garnbret. Our team consists of experts from many different fields: engineers, designers, and economists – many of whom are out climbing in their free time. This is why we can so competently advise our clients and customers – we are setting the trends because we intimately understand this industry.

Citywall knows how stressful the management of your project can be. Finding and securing the right location, permit applications, managing the various internal and external teams – there is an infinitely long list of things that need your attention on the way to opening the doors of your business. With Citywall as your wall partner, there is no need to worry about the construction and installation of your climbing walls.

In terms of wall design, we strive for a level of creativity that balances clever use of space, functionality, diversity, and aesthetics. Through close collaboration with our clients, we work as efficiently as possible throughout the various phases of your project to finish on time and within budget.

Due to the skills and training of our own production and assembly teams and the ISO 9001 standards we follow consistently, we are able to achieve the envisioned goal for our clients with minimal resources and maximum efficiency.

Did you know that we have completed installation of 2000 square meters of climbing walls in as little as 6 weeks?
And 600 square meters in only 11 days?

From the time that we finalize your wall design to the time that we install the last wall panel, Citywall is the fastest in the industry.
