

BORN FROM A DREAM

"Hi, I'm Mauro Calibani, former boulder world champion and founder of E9. But mostly, climber and human. E9, its art and creative style, was born in 1998 from the dreams of a boy lost inside himself and the forests of Meschia. The brand grew as I grew filled with creative energy and inspiration from the round and smooth forms of the sandstone rocks that I caressed every day."

The ready-to-dye fabrics are soaked in dye baths, and the colors are specifically studied and developed by us.

Therefore, the E9 items have a more weathered and precious look when compared to the garments produced with an already dyed fabric.

In order to guarantee the maximum respect of the environment, The Quality System of dye treatments is UNI EN ISO 9002 certified and is equipped with anti-pollution systems.

WE ARE PROUD OF:

Organic cotton is grown using methods and materials that have a low impact on the environment. Organic production systems are used to fertilize the soil, eliminating the use of pesticides and chemical fertilizers, toxic and persistent in the cotton and in the environment.

Hemp is naturally organic since it fertilizes the soil and renews it with its deep roots; it is resistant and it does not need pesticides or herbicides. Opting for organic clothing is an act of caring for not only the skin, but also for the environment and often for people working in the production chain.

The "DRYTECH - Superskin" fabric offers an excellent abrasion resistance and great freedom of movement thanks to the stretch effect, allowing exceptional breathability.

The finishing on the fabric ensures fast wicking away of sweat and prevents from its saturation, avoiding the feeling of moisture.

Despite the appareance of "good old sweater", the wool of the "WOOLWOOD" series have been designed to be a good protection for your body conferring you a comfort and an a original style.

LINEN + ORGANIC COTTON

It is very important for us to work in a direction of eco-sustainability without ever losing sight of the needs of those who wear our clothes. This is why we continue to search for natural and comfortable fabrics. This path has led us to include a new fabric for this new collection: Flax cultivation has a minimal environmental impact. Its qualities make it today the mouthpiece of an eco-responsible culture.-No need for irrigation, if not natural like the rain. The annual water saving is estimated on a European scale in 650,000 million cubic meters of water.

- Its cultivation requires few fertilizers contributing to the protection of watercourses. Compared to cotton cultivation, flax requires 5 times less fertilizer.
- Absorbs carbon dioxide, contributing to the reduction of greenhouse gases,
- Usable up to its roots, each element of the plant is used for a wide range of applications.
